Biography Spicer was born in Lancashire in 1882. He became a member of the Labour Party in 1903, and was a member of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain (MFGB) by 1906. Spicer also joined the Labour Party's National Administrative Council (NAC). He was elected to the Whitehaven Board of Guardians in 1907, and to Holmfirth Urban District Council in 1914. In 1915, he became a full-time organiser of the Liverpool District of the MFGB. In this role, he was elected to the executive of the Liverpool District Executive of the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM), and was later elected to the National Executive of the Labour Party, serving as treasurer in 1918, and chairman of the NUM in 1921. Spicer was also active in many other organisations during the period: in 1913, he became chairman of the North-West District of the Co-operative Women's Guild, and he remained chairman until 1927. He became the joint chairman of the Co-operative Workmen's Association in 1919, and in that year he also became president of the Welsh District of the Trade Union Congress of Great Britain
