The struggle against the Demon Blossoc is at its peak. A witch probe from the Devil's Slaves has breached the border of Luxos and the thousand-foot ice mountain is crumbling. It is time for heroes to stand up and take a shot for freedom! Into the Phoenix is an adventure game where you will be able to explore and fight with demons, to protect good and defeat evil. With a blend of today's popular features such as turn-based battles, strong role-playing elements, puzzles and exploration, the game will surely satisfy your curiosities and keep you captivated for hours. Sent2Earth, the new British media outlet designed to unite the greatest minds in technology, medicine, science and politics, announces that the worlds of science fiction and fantasy have much to teach us. The setting doesn't have to be exotic - such as, say, Asgard, to answer the questions of our times, just as the face of a setting does not have to be familiar if the questions it answers are current: the fight against climate change, for example, has a setting of its own. Dulles Genesis challenges you to join the battle against the corrupt tyrant Monroe. Play as a drifter caught in a violent struggle to bring down the corrupt, castrating dictator whose brutality cannot be matched. At first you will be just another anonymous drifter following the government's call, but as you travel further and join in on the battle, you'll discover the truth about this world is not the one being presented. The evil Nazca Empire is coming back! The Cogs, a faction obsessed with maintaining total control at any costs, want to add a fourth enemy against Maximizer, a man with the power to control all life and death. His name is Taerlin and he is obsessed with killing Nazca. Aided by his new friend, Lord Erasmus? Don't help him as this is just part of his plan to conquer more lands. Meet Bast, an eight-year-old girl. She stands 6 foot tall and has six hands

What's new in Wild West For 3D Visual Novel Maker:

Dark and Cold Day 5 was the deciding game of the weekend. I was as nervous as ever to start the event, but this time with a girlfriend and not alone. That made it go a whole lot smoother. I have a general idea of the event layout and the meeting area. My girlfriend and I just drove up the highway and from the highway we discovered the site of the event. The parking lots were far enough apart to give one enough room to consider themselves part of the crowd. The dome itself was intimidating, but our group of friends made it easier to get in and find food and drinks. I'm actually very glad to have a new group of friends to do this with. I would have felt very out of place trying to find drink and food without a group of new friends. We still had to climb stairs up through the center of the dome, but being that we've done the last few events in artificial turf, we were prepared for not being able to find seats unless we got to the rooms first. This wasn't even an issue for this event. Getting in to our room for the first time was the worst I've felt ever. We just drove up at night and entered the dome. There was no place for us to stay anywhere. First we walked into the dome and had nowhere to sit. There was one sleeping area, and one sitting area, neither of which were where we wanted to be. Unfortunately, this is where we had to go. So there we were, miles away from anywhere we knew, with nothing to do. Finally after a couple hours of driving around we found someone with a key to let us stay at his inn. We only arrived at 2:30am so we just went to sleep so we didn't have to wake up for meetings and speeches. When we woke up it was still dark outside. I remember thinking "Should we have breakfast?" Fortunately, the answer was yes. Soon enough though, the lights flickered on and they started bringing out the food and the drinks. The speeches started around 10am, and continued until 4pm. There were so many topics that I don't even remember what they talked about. I really can't remember anything, I was way too tired to listen, but thankfully I took my girlfriend. The Free Geek program is a really cool idea. I really wanted to get more. They had "lots" left
