AD and CE brass links ($E=105 \text{ GPa}$, $\alpha=20.9 \times 10^{-6} / ^\circ\text{C}$) support a rigid rod ABC, fixed in B, bearing a linear increase in distributed load as . At the same time, at the point , i.e. in the section where , there is an increase in the load from the external load applied above the compression axis. Consider the conditions on the equilibrium boundary: ; $R_c=$; $E_c=$; ; . In the general case, consider the static problem of determining the displacements and angles of inclination of faces A and B on the equilibrium boundary. According to the classical theory of strength, when the loads do not correspond to the equilibrium conditions, i.e. for boundary conditions D, F, B, F, B, only the limit stresses need to be taken into account.
