Versionmiddleware('auth'); } } Q: Applying for a science and technology grant I work at a mid-sized company that manufactures and designs a synthetic polymer. I am about to submit an R&D grant proposal and I'm stuck at how to detail how we expect to produce a material which is great to absorb and disperses shockwaves in certain directions and reflect others. Is there a science or engineering term that describes how this would work? I'm having a hard time coming up with terms that describe this phenomenon. A: I would start with a search on high-rate impact of shockwaves. The surprising part is that you don't find anything specific to your polymer. You might also want to search for the field of "shock reflection". There is a decent Wikipedia article on the topic that starts with the high-impact question and goes into some detail on the mechanics of it. Q: How to access session data in file? I have been trying to access the session data in a file. I am unable to do so. <% String s1 = "sample123"; f988f36e3a
